Research Cooperation on “Egypt Bread Civilisation”

Dear Colleague Vujadinovic,

With great interest I received the information about your planned activities regarding the above topic. It would indeed be highly appropriate to learn more about these and other – often forgotten or neglected – legacies that contributed to the world’s food cultures, including our own. We would, therefore, appreciate to become once again your research partner in the wider context of our “European Food Project”, to which your own studies and publications on bread culture have meaningfully contributed since a long time.

Over the past 28 years, the European Institute for Comparative Cultural Research (ERICarts Institute) helped to shape, and substantiate through its trans-national research programme, the dialogue with scientific and cultural partners not only in Europe but also in many other parts of the world. Cooperative work with specialists from Egypt would thus be perfectly in line with our approach socio-cultural research as well as with the spirit of the EUROMED partnership.

Looking forward to joint activities,
with my best regards
